Pole-dancing now stands on its own as a provisionally recognized sport thanks to the Global Association of International Sports Federation, which granted the activity's international governing federation "observer status" earlier this month.

"In just eight years we have created a sport, ignited a global following and inspired a new generation of sportsmen, [sports]women and children.

Watching a competition is akin to attending a dance recital of sorts, where the athletes, often dressed in sparkly two-piece outfits or leotards, perform choreographed routines set to music on two 20-foot poles on a spotlighted stage.

One pole rotates while the other is static, which allows athletes to perform different types of tricks as outlined in the rule book.
