It's the biggest buyout in video game history, and in one fell swoop expands Xbox's first-party offerings to encompass everything from Call of Duty: Warzone to World of Warcraft; Windows Just Bought Alliance; and more. For $6.8 billion - IGN reports: Microsoft's acquisition of Activision Blizzard in 2023 is a landmark move for the company, as it brings together two of the largest publishers in the industry. The deal is expected to create a new powerhouse in the gaming industry, with the potential to dominate the market. Microsoft's move is seen as a response to the growing competition from Sony and Nintendo, who have both made significant investments in their own gaming divisions. The acquisition is also seen as a way for Microsoft to expand its presence in the entertainment industry, which is a key part of its long-term strategy. The deal is expected to be completed in the next few months, and will have a significant impact on the gaming industry as a whole.
