The announcement comes after Microsoft on Friday def eated a last-ditch effort by the US Federal Trade Commission to scuttle the company's $68.7 billion purchase of Activision Blizzard. The Ninth Ci rcuit Court of Appeals declined to grant the regulator an emergency stay of a ruling that allows the deal to proceed in the US. The United Kingdom's Markets and Competition Authority (CMA) is the last remaining reg ulator of note opposed to the purchase, but the watchdog and Microsoft recently agreed to put their legal battle over the deal on hold and negotiate a compromise.

"From Day One of this acquisition, we've been committed to addressing the concerns of regulators, platform and game developers, and con sumers," Microsoft President and Vice Chair Brad Smith tweeted in response to Spencer's post. "Even after we cross the finish line for this deal's approval, we will remain focused on ensuring that Call of Duty remains available on more platforms and for more consumers than ever before.

Spencer did not disclose the terms of Microsoft's deal w ith Sony, though Stephen Totilo of Axios later confirmed that it is 10 years in duration. Microsoft first offered Sony a 10-year deal to keep Call of Duty on current and future PlayStation consoles at the end of last y ear, though the Japanese electronics giant turned down the olive branch at the t ime. In an effort to secure approval from regulators, including the F

TC and CMA, Microsoft went on to sign an agreement with Nintendo to b ring the series to the company's future consoles. It also came to terms with cloud gaming providers like NVIDIA.

Before today, Jim Ryan, the president and CEO of Sony Interactive Enter tainment, made clear he was strongly opposed to Microsoft's Activ ision bid. "I don't want a new Call of Duty deal. I just want to block your merg er," Ryan told Activision CEO Bobby Kotick. "I told him [Kotick] that I thought the transaction was anti-competitive, I hoped that the regulators would do their job and block it." Ryan later said during his testimony a
